GETTING THE MOST FROM YOUR CAMPAIGNS TEAM

SKILLS AUDIT

It can be a bit of a cliché but it's easier to get elected with a quality team around, identifying the key people you need to help you with your campaign is worth spending time on…

1. Use the first column to identify the skills that you will need to get elected, some examples include public speaking, design, translation, social media.
2. Next honestly asses your ability out of ten for each the skills listed.
3. Next think of someone you know who is better than you.
4. Finally, you should now have identified who you need to be asking to join your team.

PLANNING YOUR TIME

There are no votes without students so work out where they will be in sizeable enough numbers to be worthwhile. The campaign team that stays together risks losing together.

Use the below table to identify all the locations on and off campus where students gather on each of the polling days, consider why they gather to hone your message and start putting names to places.

When?	Where?	Why?	Who?
